With our insurance contingency option, we get paid when you recover. Because our fee is based on what we recover, you can be assured that we won't leave anything on the table.

WHY?

Let's face it: Insurance companies often have unlimited resources when it comes to fighting claims. They want the prospect of drawn-out litigation and mounting legal fees to force clients to settle ... often for far less than they hoped.

HOW?

Our attorneys shift the power dynamic because we know how to interpret policies, understand how to place a value on business interruptions and property losses, and find coverage where others cannot. We're used to tough cases and pull no punches when it comes to fighting for you.

Insurance backstops a corporation's risk profile. In the ideal world, claims are approved or are never required, but that is not the reality. Insurance carriers can make pursuing a claim expensive, time consuming and, more importantly, take in-house counsel, risk managers and corporate executives away from focusing on core business functions. We realize the claims process can drain resources and result in even larger losses if the effort fails or the eventual settlement is less than expected. Farella has an alternative.

Our Insurance Recovery Group Contingency Option can take your matter with no or significantly reduced attorney fees through settlement or trial. Because we link our fee to your recovery, you know we will be focused on recovering as much as possible, as efficiently as possible. Let our team of attorneys and risk management professionals' experience work for you and create potential return on limited investment.
